Triumph rises to the carbon footprint challenge with three new Environmental Standards

Triumph, Britain's leading manufacturer of steel furniture for business, announced today that it has added three entirely new environmental standards to support its ongoing programme of continuous environmental improvement.

In addition to its six existing key standards, it now belongs to ClubGreen, the UK Furniture Industry Research Association's integrated approach to environmental improvement.

It has also joined fisp - the Furniture Industry Sustainability Programme. A working group dedicated to the introduction of sustainable manufacturing and production processes at every opportunity.

Finally, it is now part of Valpak, a non profit organisation promoting compliance and responsible recycling solutions for packaging.

Commenting on these moves Tony Hendrick, Triumph's Director of Sales and Marketing said, "As a manufacturer, Triumph is in the forefront of reducing and preventing pollution. We always look for a reduction in consumption of resources, and the correct disposal or reuse of any waste generated in our processes - wherever we can. These new standards are a welcome addition to our compliance strategy."
