The Home Office Marsham Street, London SW1

A new London Headquarters Building, to house both the Home Office and the Prison Service, with 3,500 staff all under one roof

The Client The Home Office

The Brief Triumph won the contract to supply 4,600 items of metal furniture and special security products for the Home Office against competitive tender

Delivery was required against specific milestones and completed in the Autumn 2004

The Storage Special design elements were produced by Triumph's in house design team, to satisfy the unique requirements of the Home Office for steel office storage cabinets and furniture. A demanding task given the vital requirements for security of access

Complex production, delivery and installation planning was also essential to satisfy both the requirements of the difficult Central London location, and the sensitive nature of Home Office security issues

Triumph relied heavily on their experienced in house delivery and installation teams, who worked to tight deadlines to integrate the office furniture installation with the multitude of other trades working in the building. Detailed on-site supervision was carried out by Triumph's own Chief Facilities Manager working closely with the main contractor and Home Office liaison officers as necessary

The whole project demonstrated the essential qualities of team work which are always necessary to successfully manufacture, deliver and install products on time, on budget, whilst also meeting full client requirements

This was the largest single project ever undertaken by Triumph, and was successfully delivered and installed on time, and to demanding Home Office standards
